WOW... I just completed reading the book. Emotion wise, I was screaming inside "No, No, No", because it was like I was watching from behind a glass wall and couldn't help, and had to put the book down a few times to take a break, so needless to say it was a very powerful book! Second, the author is so gifted in the way she can paint pictures in words. I could almost see, feel and smell what she was describing. Then, after all the (I won't reveal more about the book here!)happened to her, she then seemed to have us hold our breath longer than it would taken to swim the English Channel to find out the ending. WOW!

When is the sequel?
